1. the following regulations on certificates of residence and travel were in effect in the Hangchou, Ningpo, and Shaohsing (N 30-00, E 120-34) areas:
 - a. One resident certificate per domicile was required, each certificate to include a list of all persons in the domicile. No photographs were required. Children at birth were registered on this certificate, which was a national document but was issued by the local public security bureau; no renewals were required. These certificates were posted on the walls of the domiciles. 25X1
 - b. For a labor certificate photographs were required, but no guarantor was necessary. To travel in and/or out of the area, a labor certificate was necessary. If the visit was for more than one day, the visitor was required to register with the local police of the place visited; if for less than 24 hours, no registration was required.
 - c. All certificates for all individuals were similar in size, color, and wording. All residents were subject to all controls; no exceptions were made for any class or for professional people. 25X1
 - d. Only spot checking of certificates was conducted. One check point observed was at Lungshan (N 30-04, E 121-34). As documents were checked, only a visual examination was made; no entries, numbers, or chops were matched with records or lists. Bundles and the contents of carts or trucks were not checked on streets or country roads. Young men, even of military age, were not checked while traveling.
2. The only currency in this area was the JMP; gold evaluations were not known.
